Fruit and Vegetable

Have you had your “red” today? For years, nutritionists have encouraged us to put a rainbow of fruits and vegetables on our plates every day to stay healthy. Fruits and veggies in the red group help maintain a healthy heart, memory function, a lower risk of some cancers, and urinary tract health.

What better way to start the summer than with luscious South Carolina grown tomatoes which are now arriving at local markets throughout the state.

The good news is that South Carolina grown tomatoes have NOT been associated with the recent salmonellosis outbreak. One reason is that South Carolina growers and others in the industry use both good agricultural practices and good handling practices when producing, packing, and shipping produce.

Eating well (for taste and health) means enjoying Certified SC Grown tomatoes. Stuffed and baked or sliced or diced, South Carolina grown tomatoes are packed with lycopene which is a potent antioxidant shown to prevent cancer.

Hugh Weathers, Commissioner of Agriculture, says, “Don’t miss our window of opportunity to get your red. Buy local. SC grown tomatoes are in peak season during June and July. Nothing’s fresher. Nothing’s finer. Look for the Certified SC Grown logo and buy South Carolina grown tomatoes where you shop.”

For more information about Certified South Carolina produce, call Martin Eubanks, SCDA Director of Marketing, 803-734-2200.

Certified SC Peaches Night at "The Joe"

Nothing's more American than baseball, hotdogs, and Mom's "peach" pie - made with Certified SC Grown peaches.

To celebrate South Carolina's peach harvest season and the South Carolina Department of Agriculture's Certified SC Grown program, Hugh Weathers, Commissioner of Agriculture, invites everyone to join him for "Peach Night" at the Joseph P. Riley, Jr. Park, home of the Charleston RiverDogs, on Friday, June 27.

Commissioner Weathers will sing the National Anthem during the pre-game activities and throw out the first 'peach' as the RiverDogs take on the Columbus Catfish at "The Joe."

"Nothing says South Carolina like a tasty peach and baseball," Weathers said. "And South Carolina is the 'Tastier Peach State.'" The Certified SC program which was launched in May 2007 is an exciting public-private partnership among producers, processors, wholesalers, retailers and the South Carolina Department of Agriculture to brand and promote South Carolina products. The Department's goal is for consumers to be able to easily identify, find and buy South Carolina products by building brand awareness.

Each guest to the game will receive a South Carolina peach as they leave the ballpark. Commissioner Weathers added, "Nothing's fresher. Nothing's finer. Look for and buy South Carolina's tastier peach."

"The Joe" is located at 360 Fishburne Street in Charleston. The game is scheduled for 7:05 p.m. Gates open at 6:00 p.m. For tickets, call the RiverDogs box office at 843-577-DOGS (3647) or visit their website at www.riverdogs.com.

For more information about the Certified SC Grown program, contact Ansley Rast, program manager, 803-734-2200, arast@scda.sc.gov or visit www.agriculture.sc.gov.

Partnership Unites SC Shrimp Industry and State Agencies to Raise Awareness for SC Wild Shrimp throughout Lowcountry

Program Asks South Carolinians to “Go Wild” and Demand Local, Wild Shrimp

Through a grant from the National Oceanic & Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), the South Carolina Sea Grant Extension Program, Clemson University, the South Carolina Department of Agriculture, and the South Carolina shrimp industry have announced a new challenge for South Carolinians to “Go Wild” for local shrimp. The partnership has implemented a series of summer-long outdoor board messages, encouraging South Carolinians throughout the Lowcountry to “Go Wild” by asking for and buying local, wild shrimp.

America by Food - an exploration of culture
in agriculture
begins in Ellore

Years ago I remember hearing fans yelling 'Culture vs. Agriculture' at Clemson-South Carolina football games. Obviously, those fans were caught up in the moment and failed to realize that there is culture in agriculture, more than in just the literal sense. Agriculture also contributes to our cultural heritage. More and more, people visit rural cities and towns across the state looking for a genuine connection to their roots. Agriculture brings them that connection - particularly through food.

Because agriculture is closely tied to our culture and heritage, several South Carolina museums and the 2008 South Carolina State Fair will be participating in the Smithsonian Institute's

Launched at the beginning of this year’s shrimping season, the agencies are working to promote South Carolina wild shrimp and to make South Carolinians aware of the barriers facing local shrimpers. With rising fuel costs, increased foreign competition and the loss of working waterfronts, South Carolina shrimpers are seeing a loss in sales and profits in the industry.

“South Carolina consumers often assume that they are eating South Carolina shrimp while dining in local seafood restaurants when in fact they are eating foreign, frozen shrimp,” said Commissioner Hugh Weathers. To address these issues, the partnership has created an outdoor board campaign encouraging South Carolinians to “Go Wild” for South Carolina wild shrimp in order to support our local commercial shrimp industry through the purchase and consumption of shrimp from the waters of South Carolina.

“The program is based on the idea that if South Carolinians know where to find local shrimp, they will be more than willing to choose local over imported,” said Robert Bacon, Program Leader of the SC Sea Grant Extension Program.

The ability to distinguish between local and imported shrimp has been made easier thanks to the South Carolina Department of Agriculture. The SCDA, under the leadership of Commissioner Hugh Weathers, has launched both Certified SC Grown and Fresh on the Menu, two programs that identify retailers and restaurants, which have pledged to serve and sell South Carolina grown food and products. A directory of Certified SC Grown products, including retailers and seafood members, as well as a listing of Fresh on the Menu restaurants, is available at: www.agriculture.sc.gov.

Wild American Shrimp, Inc. (WASI) representing shrimpers in eight southern states including South Carolina, focuses on raising public awareness about the advantages of choosing local wild shrimp. WASI takes the focus one step further by only certifying local wild shrimp that meet stringent quality standards to ensure that premium shrimp products are brought to market. For more information about WASI, visit www.wildamericanshrimp.com.

“Shrimping has historically been a vital industry for our state,” said Commissioner Weathers. “And in order for local shrimpers to continue contributing to our state’s economy, South Carolinians can show their support by purchasing and asking for South Carolina wild shrimp.”

South Carolinians can look for “Go Wild” outdoor boards along the coast beginning now throughout the summer. South Carolina consumers can also look for Certified SC Grown signage on displays in stores throughout the state selling Certified SC Grown produce and products. Over 50 Charleston restaurants are currently participating in the Fresh on the Menu program, and plans are underway to implement the program throughout the Lowcountry this summer.

In addition, the program will include “Ethanol’s Future – Food vs Fuel” with Matt Sederstrom, V.P. Marketing and Project Development, Fagen Incorporated, Granite Falls, MN.

Rooms may be reserved at the convention rates by calling the Marriott Grande Dunes Resort, 843-449-8880 by June 23, 2008.

Key Ingredients

traveling exhibition, Key Ingredients: America by Food. The exhibit will be on view at a variety of venues in South Carolina from June 2008 until June 2010. Key Ingredients is part of the Smithsonian's Museum on Main Street Project, a national, state, and local partnership to bring exhibitions and programs to rural cultural organizations. It is designed to draw tourists to communities bringing revenue with them. It will also be an educational experience for South Carolinians who live in these communities.

Key Ingredients will be launched in South Carolina on June 27th with a special Certified South Carolina Grown reception at the Elloree Heritage Museum and Cultural Center in Elloree, SC. My wife, Blanche, is a board member at the museum, so it wasn't too difficult to get the museum to showcase the Certified SC program in this unique way. While featuring Certified SC grown, the Key Ingredients event will also help tell the story of our state's diverse regional cooking and eating traditions. Through locally grown and processed food, the event will provide insight into how our culture, customs, and tradition influence the foods and flavors we enjoy.

I have attended several events over the years at the Elloree museum. It has a Smithsonian feel to it with the various farming exhibits. Our neighbor Margaret Riddle donated an old-style cotton gin and press from her family's collection.

Agriculture has a long history in Elloree. Hagues Landing on the Santee, six miles from Elloree, was where small boats and barges hauled cotton and freight to Charleston. Cotton is still a big industry in Elloree, but the area is now known for a large peanut industry as well as other row crops. Farmers also grow plants and flowers and a variety of produce like fresh strawberries. So, it just seems fitting to begin the exploration of South Carolina's food culture in the town of Elloree.

After the Certified SC Grown opening reception to launch Key Ingredients, the Elloree Museum will host other events through July 31st to demonstrate how food on the table in Elloree is rooted in centuries of borrowing and sharing between people across generations. Each of the events will underscore the contributions of the early English and German settlers as well as the Sioux Indian tribes that lived in the area along the banks of the Zantee or Serette (the Santee) which meant "the river" in their language.

Early settlers in the area fought with Francis Marion and other patriots for our independence and joined the Confederacy in 1860. When the war was over, they rebuilt the town and called it Elloree, which means "the home I love." Blanche calls it the 'pearl of Orangeburg County'.

Other upcoming Key Ingredients events in Elloree include: the opening of the Elloree Farmers Market on Saturday, June 21st; Independence Day Town Picnic on Friday, July 4th; Children's Summer Camp - Cooking Classes (for ages 6 - 10), Tuesday - Thursday, July 8th - 10th; Children's Summer Camp - Cooking Classes (for ages 10 - 14), Tuesday - Thursday, July 15th - 17th; a Victorian Tea Party, Saturday, July 26th; and Taste of Summer with Chef Chris Williams on July 31st.

Future Key Ingredients exhibitions around the state will include: October 24, 2008 - December 21, 2008 - National Bean Market Museum in Lake City, SC; August 15, 2008 - October 5, 2008 - Belton Area Museum Association in Belton, SC; October 8, 2008 - October 19, 2008 - South Carolina State Fair in Columbia, SC ; January 9, 2009 - March 1, 2009 - Edgefield County Peach Museum in Johnston, SC; March 6, 2009 - May 9, 2009, The Edisto Island Museum in Edisto Island, SC; and June 1, 2009 - June 1, 2010, Test Museum in Lexington, SC

Stay tuned for more information about this exciting exploration of culture in agriculture, Key Ingredients: America by Food (<http://www.keyingredients.org>).

Hugh E. Weathers, Commissioner

Weathers urges residents to plan for livestock prior to a hurricane

Hugh Weathers, Commissioner of Agriculture, urges residents to plan ahead for their animals for the upcoming Atlantic hurricane season which runs from June 1 to November 30 each year.

Weathers said people should not wait until an evacuation order is given to think about how they will deal with their livestock and pets. Forecasters are calling for an active storm season in 2008, with an expected 12 to 16 named storms and two to five major hurricanes could form.

"With some prior planning people can ensure their animals, both large and small, do not become victims of a storm," Weathers said. "I think we have all learned valuable lessons from previous hurricanes that have hit this state and nation."

The South Carolina Department of Agriculture offers several tips for residents to think about while planning for a hurricane or any natural disaster.

- Keep animal vaccinations and other health requirements up to date.
- If possible, make arrangements in advance for evacuation of horses.
- Make sure trailers for carrying animals are current on maintenance.
- Keep food and potable water on hand.
- Carry animal health and vaccination records with you during an evacuation.

"Each citizen, farmers and non-farmers, should have a plan for the hurricane season," Weathers said. "Review or complete your emergency plans now before a storm."

For more information on animal emergency preparedness plans visit Clemson's at www.clemson.edu/ep. For information on evacuating livestock, contact Mary Ellen Tobias, SC Department of Agriculture, 803- 734-2210, or visit www.agriculture.sc.gov and click on Livestock Evacuation under Producer Quick Links.

Market News gets a new look (and sound)!

Market News got a facelift with the recent launching of the South Carolina Department of Agriculture's new web site. Now reports are easier than ever to find. Follow the link at www.agriculture.sc.gov to the Market News section.

Hugh Weathers, Commissioner of Agriculture, said, "The technological revolution has taken hold of the Market News. What once took days through the mail, now takes seconds over the Internet. I am proud of our ability to release market information quickly and accurately through this new tool."

Each area of Market News - Fruit & Vegetable, Livestock and Grain - has direct links to frequently used reports including the daily shed report, terminal report, daily livestock auction reports and the daily grain report.

Market News also now features online audio recordings. Updated daily, each recording reports the latest futures prices for various commodities and offers a brief synopsis of the previous day's market conditions and prices.

In addition, a list of SC grown produce available at the Columbia State Farmers Market is featured as well as the weekly newsletter and links to other useful web sites including the American Marketing Service and Chicago Board of Trade. Check out this new, interactive site at www.agriculture.sc.gov.

Also, all the audio recordings can be heard via telephone by dialing 803-737-2900.

For more information about the Market News Service, call Jack Dantzler, Director of Inspection and Grading and Market News, 803-737-4597.

Plan ahead for droughts with a grazing plan

South Carolina may be seeing more rainfall this year than last, but that doesn't mean the state is no longer under drought conditions.

When the South Carolina Drought Response Committee met in Columbia on April 16, 2008, they decided to maintain the drought status at "severe" for 12 South Carolina counties ranging from the Upstate to the upper central region of the state. Fourteen counties were downgraded to moderate while 20 were lowered to incipient.

John Andrae, a forage specialist with Clemson University, said hay production in the Upstate is still off, but better than last year. Recently people have gotten a first cutting of hay.

"It's sure different this year, but we aren't out of the woods yet," Andrae said.

Input costs, such as fuel, have gone up and that drives up hay costs. Owners of goats, cattle and horses are have been impacted the most because they depend on pastures and hay more than other animal owners. With a drought farmers and ranchers are encouraged to create a grazing plan to alleviate any undue hardships caused by a lack of rain. Livestock owners should plan now to minimize hay needs, stock moderately, use diverse forages to help extend the grazing season and use controlled grazing.

Some of the suggestions Andrae and John Irwin, from the Laurens County Extension Office, offer is early weaning calves at four to five months rather than the traditional seven to nine months to ease nutrition requirements on the mother. Irwin said the weaned animals need to be fed awhile before they are marketed. Another option is selling off livestock early to get good prices.

People with sheep and goats can feed them on deer browse and other broad leaves. Irwin warns against feeding shrubbery clippings to animals because many are poisonous. Irwin said vegetables clippings, watermelons and cantaloupes are good to supplement cows too. Supplemental feeds are good for the short run to get livestock owners through a drought. Cottonseed and soybean hulls can be used to feed as well, but since last years drought the prices have gone up.

To learn more about grazing plans, livestock owners should call their local extension agent for information. John Irwin, Clemson Extension agent in Laurens County, can be reached at 864-984-2514, ext. 117.

$400 rebate available for SC fresh produce growers, packers, & wholesalers

Food safety is on the minds of everyone. In order to assure product safety, many produce buyers now require or soon will require growers, packers, and shippers to participate in a Good Agricultural Practice and Good Handling Practice Food Safety Audit.

In 1998, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) jointly issued a guidance document for the fresh fruit and vegetable industry that provided general guidelines for reducing the possibility of contamination of fresh produce by microbial organisms. As a result of requests from customers, primarily shippers and growers, an independent third party audit-based service was established.

In cooperation with the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), the South Carolina Department of Agriculture's Fruit and Vegetable Inspection Service offers the official USDA audit that follows produce from the field, through the packing house, and on to the wholesale level.

To encourage participation in the program, the SC Department of Agriculture is now offering a $400 rebate to participants to defray the cost of the program.

Commissioner Weathers said, "Our grading and inspection team is always looking for ways to provide services that will benefit the industry – and this is a worthwhile effort to benefit buyers and sellers. Through the program, our Fruit and Vegetable Grading and Inspection team is helping growers, packers, and shippers demonstrate that they adhered to generally recognized good agricultural practices and good handling practices guidelines when the audit was performed. The results of the audit are considered valid for one calendar year."

For a limited time, the Department of Agriculture is offering a $400 rebate only towards this USDA audit fee. For more information about the audit and the $400 rebate, growers, packers, and shippers should contact Jack M. Dantzler, Director of Inspection and Grading and Market News, 803-737-4597.
